

SHISHUR

(Winter)

"Spring passes and one remembers one's innocence.
Summer passes and one remembers one's exuberance.
Autumn passes and one remembers one's reverence.
Winter passes and one remembers one's perseverance."

The falling of leaves in autumn hail the arrival of winter in the valley. Shades of green which were a reverie in summer are pushed to the background by oranges and reds heralding autumn. The chinar trees which bloomed carelessly in the corridors of the world now stop and prepare for the arrival of the cold white sheets which would drop down and would force upon them the rule of the survival of the fittest.

Everything now lie fallow. The fertile mother earth would look helpless under the heavy blanket which soon veil her. The cries of the children would be hushed by the frost and the chirpy songs of birds would be silent for a long while to come. The Dal Lake which was bustling with activity would wear a white shawl. The men folk would quietly work their way in the evenings.

The cold shades of winter cannot dull the spirit of the mortals and other living beings. If nature is cruel, the living beings have also to face the test of time and proved that there are only the fittest so each one survives. The daily hustle and bustle might slow down for a while but it will never totally freeze. Life is an on going process and each one determinedly plays a part to make it a success.

BOUNE –A DOCUMENTARY BY DPS SRINAGAR.

Chinar, known as bouné in Kashmiri language, is an integral part of the culture of Kashmir. With its botanical name as Platanus Orientalis, it has become part of Kashmiri heritage over last seven centuries rather it is now a symbol of Kashmir and its lush green environs. Almost every village in Kashmir has a chinar tree. One can experience a cool breeze under the shadow of this majestic tree which is conducive to health. Whenever someone talks about a majestic tree the immediate idea that strikes the mind of a person is that of chinar. It is a towering deciduous tree with huge and spread out branches with maple leaf like leaves. The tree can grow upto 250 feet in height and its girth could be 50-60 feet average. Its charm increases incredibly during autumn as its leaves start changing colours from green to reddish brown and then golden brown before falling.

To know more about chinar and its cultural history, thirty six volunteer students of DPS Srinagar set out on a journey to visit the two possible oldest chinar trees in Kashmir and adopt one of them as their monument. Guided by the teachers on 17th October 2012, the students headed towards Bijbehara town of South Kashmir where a chinar tree which is believed to be about 400 years old exists. On October 18th, 2012, the team proceeded further to visit another oldest chinar tree in Kashmir with a girth of 75 feet planted by a Muslim preacher Syed-Abul Qasim Shah Hamdani about 638 years ago in Chatargam, Chadoora, Budgam somewhere in 1347 AD. The students measured the trees themselves and interacted with the local crowd to figure out the truth behind the controversy the 'oldest chinar'.

DIPSITES chose chinars as core subject for their survey and made a documentary on the same as chinars have undergone the heritage of Kashmir and are themselves an integral part of it. Many people relate to them with their own diversified folk tales and thus act as a representative of each and every chinar in Kashmir.

Chinar is nature's best gift evolved over centuries that has been bequeathed to us by our ancestors. From Greece, Balkans, Turkey, Iran the majestic tree has come to us over a period of time which we can't afford to neglect. Infact we can't even think of Kashmir without the chinar as it has become part of our lives, culture, history, geography and heritage.

LET US DO OUR BIT

The Students of DPS, Srinagar visited the Frislan fire victims on Dec. 6, 2012. They donated clothes, blankets, quilts, etc. to the sufferers as they have lost everything right from shelter to clothes during these days of intense cold.

DIPSITES took this initiative to provide immediate help to the fire victims in the hour of need.

The students were accompanied by Mrs. Kiran Dhar, Principal – Ms. Kusam Warikoo and the staff members.

THE STUDENT'S VISION

Eleven volunteer students took an initiative towards developing a spirit of enthusiasm and belongingness amongst all the members of the school - students, teachers and administration. A presentation focusing on the effective functioning of the student council and house structure was given by them. The committee recognized the fact that a student initiative alone is most likely to be futile. Therefore a framework was suggested that would include the administration and teachers. The mission says that the school seeks to provide an environment of education that allows children to understand ways of making their life meaningful, to contemplate on issues that matter and to engage in constructive dialogues. It is important to note that the school shall not focus on providing answers but the endeavor should rather be to allow children understand the different ways of making their life meaningful. The emphasis should be on providing a platform to the students where contradictory world views can be discussed and understood.

The core areas covered in the presentation were the Challenges faced by the School, Vision and Working of the Student Council, Members and Representatives and the Selection process. The entire effort put in by the Student Committee says that the emphasis is not on the Institution, but on the Values that it stands for.

The presenters were Saquib Shawe, Mahoor Shaw, Fariya Tahir, Anika Adfar, Maryam Qadri, Mukarram A. Wahid, Wamiq Reyaz, Maumoon Ahmad, Salwa Neyaz, and Iftikhar Hassan Samoon.

TIME TO EVALUATE

Evaluation is universally accepted as an integral part of teaching and learning. It is one of the basic components of any curriculum and plays a pivotal role in determining what learners learn and what the teachers teach in schools. It's purpose is to analyse the effectiveness and outcomes of the entire year of hardwork. It is important to periodically assess and adapt activities to ensure they are as effective as they can be. December 2012, Our students appeared for the Final term examination where they were evaluated on the basis of certain parameters set by the school. The teachers concerned further discussed the remedial measures to be taken with the students as the areas for improvement were identified which would ultimately help them realize their goals more efficiently.
